THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

HOW THINGS LOOK FROM OUR STAND POINT.

The Opinion of The Editor and the Opinion of Others which we Can Endorse on the Various Topics of the Day.

Several times in these columns we have referred to The Century Magazine and a class of articles it is publishing. We have above stated our belief that the magazine had been bought up by the money power was simply the mouth-piece of plutocracy. Every number of this magazine we see convinces us all the more strongly that such is the case. Our attention has just been called to an article in it headed "The Farmer's Condition." The editor goes on to use a great deal of taffy for the farmer (like some papers in the State) and tries to convice him that he has nothing to complain of. We make the following clipping:

Generally the farmer is prosperous, though he certainly fails to secure his full share in the rewards of his productive labor. He is entitled to fair consideration in such remedial measures for his protection as may be possible under our form of government. But the farmers of the United States live under better conditions for progress in their art—a high standard of living, advance in personal culture and soil improvement, and pecuniary independence—than those of any other country.

The first statement that the farmer generally is prosperous, is as absurd as President Harrison's statement in his message to Congress, that never was agriculture more remunerative and the farmer more prosperous. Two statements totally absurd and in direct contradiction with the facts. The Century says the farmer is entitled to fair protection. The farmer does not ask for protection. He asks for a free opportunity and he will do the rest.

The Century tries to back up its assertions by publishing what they they claim to be statements from farmers in various parts of the country. The following is a sample:

"No real practical efforts are made for relief. All the complaints made and all remedies proposed are political. Many of the former are absurd, and most of the latter will prove futile. We need smaller farms, more work, more knowledge and less grumbling. What can be done on small tracts highly fertilized should be brought home to the people, so that the inexperienced may imitate, even before they know the reason why."

We have heard such stuff as the above from men in this State, but not from farmers. The following is another sample:

"A somewhat extended experience in practical agriculture of the State and good opportunities for observation lead me to assert that farming, industriously and intelligently followed, offers as good inducements for the capital, labor and skill expended as does any other calling in the State."

The above is such an absolute wholesale untruth under present conditions that it is absurd. Now we don't believe that a farmer wrote either of the above statements. Now we don't suppose that many of our readers see The Century Magazine and we simply call attention to it to show our readers in how many ways the organization of farmers is being fought. Hundreds of papers have quoted from this article and endorsed it because they said The Century was high authority. This is one effect, then another is to try to convince those who do not read the magazine that there is no real course for complaint by the farmers, and that the whole thing will soon blow over. We will see.

THE LUST FOR MONEY AND THE DEVIL OF PARTY SPIRIT.

We make the following extracts from a report of a lecture by Henry Watterson on Money and Morals in Asheville a few days since:

The danger hanging above us is of a moral character due to the influence of money. We have the money standard naturally. What a struggle there is for money! The brains and genius of the country are engaged in money-making. The tendency of the times is to make money first and buy political honors afterward.

* * * * * * * *

Is there hope with the money standard so high and the moral standard so low? * * * *

The two greatest moral dangers are the lust for money and the devil of party spirit. It costs a million to set a presidential contest in motion. It may well be asked, How long before the chief magisterial office of the nation will be auctioned off to the highest bidders?

He lectures right; yet, if we remember correctly, some of the editorials in his paper, The Courier-Journal, read pretty gold-buggy.

Speaker Crisp is progressing quite rapidly toward recovery, but it will be next week, at least, before he ventures to resume his duties in the House of Representattves, and good weather will be necessary to make it entirely safe for him to visit the capitol,

DECKERING FOR PARTY SUCCESS.

Mr. Springer the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee is reported to have said in a recent speech:

"The question, the solution of which is specially imposed upon the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, is what can be done during this session which will improve our chances of success, and if possible bring some immediate relief to the people? It is my opinion—and I speak for myself alone—that much good can be accomplished by the introduction and passage through the House of separate bills having for their object the enlarging of the free list, the securing of free raw material, and the cheapening of many of the necessaries of life to the great mass of the consumers of the country."

If he is correctly reported, the above shows that he considers that Congress' greatest duty is to manoeuvre for party success in the next campaign, and if in doing this they might incidentely do something for the peoples' relief (without hurting the party) then they would consider it a duty to do so. In short the people and their interest are of secondary importance to the party and the loaves and fishes for officers. Such a statement coming from Mr. Springer, the second man in power in Congress, is seighnificant of great depravity among the nations law makers. What a low standard of patriotism and statesmanship! Then again he is for tariff reduction on raw materials—such tariff reform can not benefit the people, it will benefit the manufacture only. So leave the tax on manufactured articles and take it off of raw materials is a compound imposition upon the people. Have the manufactures captured the Democratic party?

SO FAR, SO GOOD.

The Richmond Dispatch has interviewed Congressman Cowles. We make the following clipping from the interview:

Speaking of the free-coinage of silver question, Colonel Cowles said this morning that he would vote for a free-coinage bill whenever he had an opportunity. It was, in his opinion, an issue equal in importance to the tariff, and free silver was as much demanded in his State as low tariff and reduced taxation. He was tired, he added, of pandering to the wishes of Wall street, and if the New York people couldn't fall in lines with the great majority of American citizens the State had better fall out of the procession when the presidential contest opens up.

Colonel Cowles said further that there was a strong sentiment in North Carolina in favor of the passage of a free coinage bill by the present Congress.

So far, so good, and if Col. Cowles will fight and vote along the same line he is reported to have talked he will strengthen himself in this State. But our people have learned the difference between talking and doing. They are watching for work, votes, and results.

IF WAR WITH CHILI?

It is with Chili. The U. S. has said what it would do, and what she expected to be done, it only remains with Chili to say whether she will do it or not.

In case of war, what? The situation of Chili is worthy of notice. It is a long, narrow streak of land, between the Andes Mountains and the Pacific Ocean. It is 2,270 miles long and from 40 to 200 wide, containing 218,925 square miles. It has a population of about 2,718,843. It has a standing army of 40,000 and navy of about 35,000, while the U. S. has an army of 28,000 and navy of about 10,000.

President Harrison has sent a special message to Congress on the subject and it can only await Chili's action,

One More Offer.

We have received a number of letters and requests to hold our $1.00 special reduction offer open a week or two more. Some have written that they were getting us up a club and others said they had friends and neighbors who would subscribe soon. The secretaries of some Sub-Lodges have written that they will get up a club at their next meetings. While we have not gotten more than half of the subscribers we needed, this is very encouraging, so we have decided to keep the proposition open till February 1st. Now let every reader and friend of the paper determine that we shall have the 3000 subscribers by then. Talk for the paper, work for it and we will reach it. We are very anxious to put the price of THE CAUCASIAN at $1.00 and you my dear readers certainly ought to be more anxious if possible for us to be able to do so. As soon as you get one subscriber, send the name on to us.

UNDER THE LYON'S PAW.

BY HAMLIN GARLAND.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.

It was the last of autumn and first day of winter coming together. All day long the ploughmen on their prairie farms had moved to and fro on their wide level field through the falling snow, which melted as it fell, wetting them to the skin—all day, notwithstanding the frequent squalls of snow, the dripping, desolate clouds, and the muck of the furrows, black and tenacious as tar.

Under their dripping harness the horses swung to and fro silently, with that marvellous uncomplaining patience which marks the horse. All day the wild geese, honking wildly, as they sprawled sidewise down the wind, seemed to be fleeing from an enmy behind, and with neck outthroust and wings extended, sailed down the wind, soon lost to sight.

Yet the ploughman behind his plough, though the snow lay on his ragged great-coat, and the cold clinging mud rose on his heavy boots, fettering him like gyves, whistled in the very beard of the gale. As day passed, the snow, ceasing to melt, lay along the plough land, and lodged in the depth of the stubbled, till on each slow round the last furrow stood out black and shining as jet between the ploughed land and the gray stubble.

When night began to fall, and the geese, flying low, began to alight invisibly in the near corn-field, Stephen Council was still at work "finishing a land." He rode on his sulky-plough when going with the wind, but walked when facing it. Sitting bent and cold but cheery under his slouch hat, he talked encouragingly to his four in-hand.

"Come round there, boys!—round agin! We got t' finish this land. Come in there, Dan! Stiddy, Kate!—stddy! None o' y'r tantrums, Kittie. It's purty tuff, but got a be did. Tchk! tchk! Step along, Pete! Don't let Kate git y'r single-tree on the wheel. Once more!"

They seemed to know what he meant, and that this was the last round, for they worked with greater vigor than before.

"Once more, boys, an' sez I oats an' a nice warm stall, an' slee. I'r all."

By the time the last furrow was turned on the land it was too dark to see the house, and the snow changing to rain again. The tired and hungry man could see the light from the kitchen shining through the leafless hedge, and lifting a great shout, he yelled, "Supper I'r a half a dozen!"

HAMLIN GARLAND.
Author Main-Travelled Roads, Jason Edwards, A Spoil in Office, Etc., Etc.

It was nearly eight o'clock by the time he had finished his chores and started for supper. He was picking his way carefully through the mud, when the tall form of a man loomed up before him with a premonitory cough.

"Waddy ye want?" was the rather startled question of the farmer.

"Well, ye see," began the stranger, in a deprecating tone, "we'd like to' git in f'r the night. We've tried every house f'r the last two miles, but they hadn't any room f'r us. My wife's jest about sick, 'n' the children are cold and hungry—"

"Oh, y' want a stay all night, eh?"

"Yes, sir; it 'ud be a great accom—"

"Waal, I don't make it a practice t' turn anybuddy away hungry, not on sech nights as this. Drive right in. We ain't got much, but sech as it is—"

But the stranger had disappeared. And soon his steaming, weary team, with drooping heads and swinging single-trees, moved past the well to the block beside the path. Council stood at the side of the "schooner" and helped the children out—two little half-sleeping children—and then a small woman with a babe in her arms.

"There ye go!" he shouted, jovially, to the children. "Now we're all right. Run right along to the house there, an' tell Mam' Council you wants sumpthin' to' eat. Right this way, Mis'—keep right off to the right there. I'll go an' git a lantern. Come," he said to the dazed and silent group at this side.

"Mother," he shouted, as he neared the fragrant and warmly lighted kitchen, "here are some wayfarers an' folks who need sumpthin' to' eat an' a place t' snooze." He ended by pushing them all in.

Mrs. Council, a large, jolly, rather coarse-looking woman, took the children in her arms. "Come right in, you little rabbits. 'Most asleep, hay? Now here's a drink o' milk f'r each o' ye. I'll have s'm tea in a minute. Take off y'r things and set up t' the fire."

While she set the children to drinking milk, Council got out his lantern and went out the barn to help the stranger about his team, where his lout, hearty voice could be heard as it came and went between the hay-mow and the stalls.

The woman came to light as a small, timid, and discouraged-looking woman, but still pretty, in a thin and sorrowful way.

"Land sakes! An' you've travelled all the way from Clear Lake t' day in this mud! Waal! waal! No wander you're tired out. Don't wait f'r the men, Mis'—" She hesitated, waiting for the name.

"Haskins."

"Mis' Haskins, set right up to the table an' take a good swig o' tea, whilst I make y' s'm toast. It's green tea, an' it's good. I tell Council as I git older I don't seem t' enjoy Young Hyson n'r Gunpowder. I want the reel green tea, jest as it comes off'n the vines. Seems t' have more heart in it some way. Don't 'pose it has. Council says it's all in m' eye."

Going on in this easy way, she soon had the children filled with bread and milk and the woman thoroughly at home, eating some toast and sweet-melon pickles, and sipping the tea.

"See the little rats!" she laughed at the children. They're full as they can stick now, and they want to go to bed. Now don't git up, Mis' Haskins; set right where you are an' let me look after 'em. I know all about young ones, though I am all alone now. Jane went and married last fall. But, as I tell Council, it's lucky we keep our health. Set right there, Mis' Haskins; I won't have you stir a finger."

It was an unmeasured pleasure to sit there in the warm, homely kitchen, the joyful chatter of the housewife driving out and holding at bay the growl of the impotent, cheated wind.

The little woman's eyes filled with tears which fell down upon the sleeping baby in her arms. The world was not so desolate and cold and hopeless, after all.

"Now I hope Council won't stop out there and talk politics all night. He's the greatest man to talk politics an' read the Tribune. How old is it?"

She broke off and peered down at the face of the babe.

"Two months 'n' five days," said the mother, with a mother's exactness.

"Ye don't say! I want t' know! The dear little pudzy-wudzy!" she went on, stirring it up in the neighborhood of the ribs with her fat fore-finger.

"Pooty tough on 'oo to go gallivant'n' 'cross lots this way."

"Yes, that's so; a man can't lift a mountain," said Council, entering the door. "Sarah, this is Mr. Haskins from Kansas. He's been eat up and drove out by grasshoppers."

"Glad to see yeh! Pa, empty that wash-basin and give him a chance t' wash."

Haskins was a tall man, with a thin, gloomy face. His hair was a reddish brown, like his coat, and seemed equally faded by the wind and sun. And his sallow face, though hard and set, was pathetic somehow. You would have felt that he had suffered much by the line of his mouth showing under his thin, yellow mustache.

"Hain't Ike got home yet, Sairy?"

"Hain't seen 'im."

"W-a-a-l, set right up, Mr Haskins; wade right into what we've got; 'tain't much, but we manage to live on it—she gets fat on it," laughed Council, pointing his thumb at his wife.

After supper, while the women put the children to bed, Haskins and Council talked on, seated near the huge cooking-stove, the steam rising from their wet clothing. In the Western fashion, Countil told as much of his life as he drew from his guest. He asked but few questions; but by and by the story of Haskins' struggles and defeat came out. The story was a terrible one, but he told it quietly, seated with his elbows on his knees, gazing most of the time at the hearth.

"I didn't like the looks of the country, anyhow," Haskins said partly rising and glancing at his wife. "I was ust to northern Iowannie, where we have lots a timber 'n' lots o' rain, 'n' I didn't like the looks of that dry prairie. What galled me the worst was going so far away acrosst so much fine land layin' all through here vacant."

"And the 'hoppers eat ye four years hand running, did they?"

"Eat! They wiped us out. They chawed everything that was green. They jest set around waitin' f'r us to die to eat us too. My God! I ust to dream of 'em sittin' 'round on the bedpost, six feet long, workin' their jaws. They eat the fork-handles. They got worse and worse till they jest rolled on one another, piled up like snow in the winter. Well, it ain't no use; if I was to talk all the winter I couldn't tell nawthin'. But all the while I couldn't help thinkin' of all that land back here that nobuddy was usin', that I ought a had 'stead of being out there in that cussed country."

"Waal, why didn't ye stop and settle here?" asked Ike, who had come in and was eating his supper.

"For the simple reason that you fellers wantid ten 'r fifteen dollars an acre fer the bare land, and I hadn't no money fer that kind of thing."

"Yes, I do my own work," Mrs. Council was heard to say in the pause which followed. "I'm a-gettin' purty heavy t' be on m' laigs all day, but we can't afford to hire; so I keep rackin' around somehow, like a foundered horse. S' lame—I tell Council he can't tell how lame I am for I'm jest as lame in one laig as t'other." And the good soul laughed at the joke on herself as she took a handful of flour and dusted the biscuit-board to keep the dough from sticking.

"Well, I hain't never been very strong," said Mrs. Haskins. "Our folks was Canadians and small boned, and then since my last child I hain't got up again fairly. I don't

NOTES AND ITEMS FROM CONGRESS AND WHAT IT IS DOING.

Some Bills Introduced--Personal Mention.

Mr. Mills, who is back in Washington, says that he has eighty-six pledged votes and is certain of election to the Senate.

The National Democratic Committee, has, after mature deliberation and consideration of all the circumstances involved, decided to hold the National Democratic Convention at Chicago June 21st.

The Philadelphia Times do doubt expresses the sense of the country when it says that "the people of the United States will accept war with Chili if peace can't be maintained with honor."

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs held at the National Headquarters here this week, was presided over by Representative Wilson, of West Virginia. All of the members were present in person or by proxy, and they were all enthusiastic over the condition of the Association, which will this year make itself an important factor in the Presidential campaign. According to the report of the Secretary there are now between five and six thousand clubs in the Association, representing every State and Territory.

The new warship Monterey is to have guns that will shoot fifteen miles. A little more powder there and one of our modern naval vessels can anchor off Chilli and sweep everything west of the Andes.

It is said that on January 30 two hundred census clerks in Washington will be furloughed for sixty days without pay.

Speaker Crisp has not yet ventured out of doors, but he assisted his Democratic colleagues of the committee on Rules in the preparation of the code of rules which are to govern this House during this Congress. The rules, now completed, are largely made up from those under which the House of the 50th Congress worked, with several important additions to prevent filibustering beyond a reasonable time, and instead of giving the Speaker authority to cut off debate, as the Reed rules did, they give the majority of the House that authority.

Senator Gorman's re-election has from the first been a certainty, but that did not prevent his colleagues from overwhelming him with congratulations as soon ar it was an accomplished fact.

The drummers have secured a favorable report on their bill amending the Internal Commerce law so as to allow the railroads to give them better terms than they get now from the Commerce Committee of the House.

Those Republicans who were so certain that Mr. Mills would take no part in the present session, are not saying much just now, as that gentleman has returned much improved in health and with his usual vim has jumped right into hard work. He has declined the chairmanship of the Commerce Commit.

Hon. Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont, who was our minister to England during the Cleveland administration, will probably be one of the representatives of this country in the arbitration of the Behering Sea matter. Mr. Phelps was a guest at a state dinner at the White House this week.

Thoughtless people are predicting a short session of Congress, but men like Mr. Holman, who know that protracted controversies are certain to raise between the House and Senate over the appropriation bills do not look for an adjournment earlier than August, and will not be surprised if it does not take place earlier than October.

The Democratic Ways and Means Committee have discussed and agreed upon several bills attacking the McKinley monstrosity and enlarging the free list.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections had under consideration this morning the contested Florida election case of Call vs. Davidson, and decided by a unanimous vote to recommend that Senator Call retain his seat.

Lawrence O'B. Branch, little son of Hon. W. A. B. Branch, of North Carolina, died at his home at Washington, N. C., last week.

A bill has been introduced to test the method of spelling schools, and appropriating $100,000 to establish a spelling school at the World's Fair.

A good many naval officers put no faith in Chili's pacific overtures. They think she is trying to gain time, while she is strengthening her supply stations.

The House Committee on Currency has decided to vote upon the question of introducing a free silver coinage bill within three weeks.

Secretary Blaine had another attack of indigestion while attending a Cabinet meeting last week.

As was expected, Senators George and Walthall were returned to the Senate by large majorities.

The public reception which was to have been held at the White House has been postponed on account of the death of Justice Bradley, and the dinner which Secretary Tracy was to have given in honor of the President and Mrs. Harrison, was postponed for the same reason.

Indiana Republicans declare for President Harrison's re-nomination.

It is stated in Washington that this Government is endeavoring to arrange for an international silver convention and that negotiations to that end are now in progress with Great Britain and France.

Mr. Turpin, of Alabama, introduced a bill permitting National banks to lend money on real estate.

Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, repealing the act making the gold dollar the unit of value.

Mr. Clover, of Kansas, to enable cities to deposit United States bonds and have issued legal tender notes, to be expended for public improvements.

Mr. Lewis, of Mississippi, to prohibit the Secretary of the Treasury from making a deposit of United States funds with National or private banks.

Mr. Bland for the free coinage of gold and silver and for the issue of coin notes.

During a speech of Senator Dolph there were but two Senators seated on his own side of the chamber and about a dozen on the other side, but there was little or no pretence on the part of more than two or three Senators of feeling any interest. Senator West was speaking at 4 o'clock P. M., to an audience of less than a dozen Senators when he yielded.

Bills have been introduced for its admission of the territories of New Mexico, Utah and Arizona.

Among the bills introduced and referred were one by Senator Peffer proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of President and Vice President by popular vote.

Senators George and Walthall, of Mississippi, will both be re-elected.

Public building bills have been passed as follows: For Fergus Falls, Minnesota, $100,000; Nashua, New Hampshire, $100,000; Searesville, Ohio, $100,000; Warterbury, Connecticut, $100,000; Hastings, Nebraska, $250,000; Mansfield, Ohio, $100,000; Norfolk, Nebraska, $250,000; Jacksonville, Illinois, $75,000. Fifteen bills in all passed the Senate to-day. Grand Haven, Michigan, $50,000; Deadwood, S. D., $200,000; Dover, New Hamshire, $100,000; Salem, Oregon, $100,000; The Dalles, Oregon, $100,000; Providence, R. I., $300,000; Friano, California, $75,000.

It is said Mr. Mills did not write to Speaker Crisp declining the chairmanship of the Committee on Inter-State Commerce.

The masses of the Chilians, it is said, fully believe that there will be war with the United States and expect aid from England. Representatives of their Government are in England now seeking recognition for their Government.

The New York World says that the findings and recommendations of the Chilian official on the assault on the crew of the Baltimore. He finds three Chilians guilty and further finds John Davidson, of the Baltimore, guilty of striking with a stone a Chilian sailor while knifeing an American sailor, and recommends that the Chilians be imprisoned from two to five years and the American from ten to fifteen years. Much excitement was caused by this decision of Chili.

Senator Stanford, of Cal., has addressed the Senate in advocacy of the bill introduced by him on December 23d, providing the Government with "cash sufficient to supply the national want of a sound currency medium.

The bill proposes an issue of United States circulating notes to the amount of $100,000,000 and such additional amounts from time to time as shall be necessary to meet the requirements of the act, to be lent, under the supervision of a land loan bureau, to the owners of agricultural lands, to an amount not exceeding half the assessed valuation of the land, at the rate of two per cent interest.

Senator Stanford was followed by Senator Peffer in a long speech in favor of the bill, which was afterwards laid aside.

Six Democrats and a dozen Republicans formed the Senate when that body opened proceeding on Monday, the 18th. Among the latter was Senator Sherman, who appeared for the first time since his re-election.

Associate Justice Bradley, of the United States Supreme Court, died at 6:15 o'clock on Friday morning.

In the discussion of this measure Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, had an opportunity to enter the arena of debate and his brief remarks were listened to with great attention. He stood in the front of one of the aisles. His attitude was easy and his delivery good. He started off with the declaration that the $15,000 already appropriated had been squandered, but he was strongly in favor of the pending measure, as it would allow settlers to secure homes. He hoped that the House, with its large Democratic majority, would do what ought to have been done before. Touching upon the tariff, he asserted that the protective tariff policy, as pursued by the Republican party, instead of bringing prosperity to the farmers, had brought disaster. (Democratic applause), and they wanted to seek holmes and begin life under a Democratic administration which, he hoped, would repeal the McKinley bill and all kindred tariff laws and bring prosperity to the country. The bill passed.

OUR DAILY RELIGION.

DR. TALMAGE DELIVERS AN EXTREMELY PRACTICAL SERMON.

He Who Sails Heavenward but One Day in the Week Will Never Get There—No Earthly Work Is Too Small to Have the Christian Spirit Put Into It.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 31.—Dr. Talmage's sermon this morning was on the topic on which he is never tired of insisting, and which, more than any other, constitutes his message to this generation—the application of religion to the affairs of daily life. His text was taken from 1 Corinthians x, 31, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

When the apostle, in this text, sets forth the idea that so common an action as the taking of food and drink is to be conducted to the glory of God, he proclaims the importance of religion in the ordinary affairs of our life. In all ages of the world there has been a tendency to set apart certain days, places and occasions for worship, and to think those were the chief realms in which religion was to act. Now, holy days and holy places have their importance. They give opportunity for especial performance of Christian duty, and for regaling of the religious appetite; but they cannot take the place of continuous exercise of faith and prayer.

In other words, a man cannot be so much of a Christian on Sunday that he can afford to be a worldling all the rest of the week. If a steamer put out for Southampton, and go one day in that direction and the other six days in other directions, how long before the steamer will get to Southampton? It will never get there. And though a man may seem to be voyaging heavenward during the holy Sabbath day, if, during the following six days of the week, he is going toward the world, and toward the flesh, and toward the devil, he will never ride up into the peaceful harbor of heaven.

You cannot eat so much at the Sabbath banquet that you can afford religious abstinence the other six days. Heroism and princely behavior on great occasions are no apology for lack of right demeanor in circumstances insignificant and inconspicuous. The genuine Christian life is not spasmodic; does not go by fits and starts. It toils on through heat and cold, up steep mountains and along dangerous declivities, its eye on the everlasting hills crowned with the castles of the blessed.

I propose this morning to plead for a religion for today.

CHRIST IN OUR DAILY CONVERSATION.

In the first place we want to bring the religion of Christ into our conversation. When a dam breaks and two or three villages are overwhelmed, or an earthquake in South America swallows a whole city, then people begin to talk about the uncertainty of life, and they imagine that they are engaged in positively religious conversation. No. You may talk about these things and have no grace of God at all in your heart. We ought every day to be talking religion. If there is anything glad about it, anything beautiful about it, anything important about it, we ought to be continuously discussing it.

I have noticed that men, just in proportion as their Christian experience is shallow, talk about funerals and graveyards and tombstones and deathbeds. The real, genuine Christian man talks chiefly about this life and the great eternity beyond, and not so much about the insignificant pass between these two residences. And yet how few circles there are where the religion of Jesus Christ is welcome. Go into a circle, even of Christian people, where they are full of joy and hilarity, and talk of Christ and heaven, and everything is immediately silenced.

As on a summer day, when the forests are full of life, chatter and chirrup and carol—a mighty chorus of bird harmony, every tree branch an orchestra—if a hawk appear in the sky every voice stops, and the forests are still; just so I have seen a lively religious circle silenced on the appearance of anything like religious conversation. No one had anything to say, save perhaps some old patriarch in the corner of the room, who really thinks that something ought to be said under the circumstances; so he puts one foot over the other, and heaves a long sigh and says, "Oh, yes; that's so, that's so!"

My friends, the religion of Jesus Christ is something to talk about with a glad heart. It is brighter than the waters; it is more cheerful than the sunshine. Do not go around groaning about your religion when you ought to be singing it or talking it in cheerful tones of voice. How often it is that we find men whose lives are utterly inconsistent, who attempt to talk religion, and always make a failure of it! My friends, we must live religion or we cannot talk it. If a man is cranky and cross and uncongenial and hard in his dealings, and then begins to talk about Christ and heaven, everybody is repelled by it.

Yet I have heard such men say in whining tones, "We are miserable sinners," "The Lord bless you," "The Lord have mercy on you," their conversation interlarded with such expressions, which mean nothing but canting, and canting is the worst form of hypocrisy. If we have really felt the religion of Christ in our hearts let us talk it and talk it with an illuminated countenance, remembering that when two Christian people talk God gives especial attention and writes down what they say. Malachi iii, 16, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord harkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written."

CHRIST IN OUR DAILY LABORS.

Again I remark, we must bring the religion of Christ into our employments. "Oh," you say, "that is very well if a man handle large sums of money, or if he have an extensive traffic; but in my thread and needle store, in my trimming establishment, in the humble work in life that I am called to, the sphere is too small for the action of such grand, heavenly principles." Who told you so? Do you not know that God watches the faded leaf on the brook's surface as certainly as he does the path of a blazing sun? And the moss that creeps up the side of the rock makes as much impression upon God's mind as the waving tops of Oregon pine and Lebanon cider; and the alder, crackling under the cow's hoof, sounds as loud in God's ear as the snap of a world's conflagration.

When you have anything to do in life, however humble it may seem to be, God is always there to help you to do it. If your work is that of a fisherman, then God will help you, as he helped Simon when he dragged Gennesaret. If your work is drawing water, then he will help you, as when he talked at the well curb to the Samaritan woman. If you are engaged in the custom house he will lead you, as he led Matthew sitting at the receipt of customs. A religion that is not good in one place is not worth anything in another place. The man who has only a day's wages in his pocket as certainly needs the guidance of religion as he who rattles the keys of a bank and could abscond with a hundred thousand hard dollars.

There are those prominent in the churches who seem to be, on public occasions, very devout, who do not put the principles of Christ's religion into practice. They are the most inexorable of creditors. They are the most grasping of dealers. They are known as sharpers on the street. They fleece every sheep they can catch. A country merchant comes in to buy spring or fall goods, and he gets into the store of one of these professed Christian men who have really no grace in their hearts and he is completely swindled.

He is so overcome that he cannot get out of town during the week. He stays in town over Sunday, goes into some church to get Christian consolation, when what is his amazement to find that the very man who hands him the poor box in the church is the one who relieved him of his money! But never mind; the deacon has his black coat on now. He looks solemn, and goes home talking about "the blessed sermon." If the wheat in the churches should be put into a hopper, the first turn of the crank would make the chaff fly. I tell you.

Some of these men are great sticklers for Gospel preaching. They say: "You stand there in bands and surplice and gown, and preach—preach like an angel, and we will stand out here and attend to business. Don't mix things. Don't get business and religion in the same bucket. You attend to your matters and we will attend to ours." They do not know that God sees every cheat they have practiced in the last six years; that he can look through the iron wall of their fireproof safe; that he has counted every dishonest dollar they have in their pocket, and that a day of judgment will come. These inconsistent Christian men will sit on the Sabbath night in the house of God, singing, at the close of the service, "Rock of Ages, cleft for me," and then, when the benediction is pronounced, shut the pew door and say, as they go out, "Goodby, religion. I'll be back next Sunday."

THE CHURCH IS THE CHRISTIAN'S ARMORY.

I think that the church of God and the Sabbath are only an armory where we are to get weapons. When war comes, if a man wants to fight for his country he does not go to Troy or Springfield to do battling, but he goes there for swords and muskets. I look upon the church of Christ and the Sabbath day as only the place and time where and when we are to get armed for Christian conflict; but the battlefield is on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. "St. Martin's" and "Lenox" and "Old Hundred" do not amount to anything unless they sing all the week. A sermon is useless unless we can take it with us behind the plow and the counter. The Sabbath day is worthless if it last only twenty-four hours.

There are many Christians who say: "We are willing to serve God, but we do not want to do it in these spheres about which we are talking, and it seems so insipid and monotonous. If we had some great occasion, if we had lived in the time of Luther, if we had been Paul's traveling companion, if we could serve God on a great scale, we would do it; but we can't in this everyday life." I admit that a great deal of the romance and knight errantry of life have disappeared before the advance of this practical age.

The ancient temples of Rouen have been changed into storehouses and smithies. The residences of poets and princes have been turned into brokers' shops. The classic mansion of Ashland has been cut up into walking sticks. The groves where the poets said the gods dwelt have been carted out for fire wood. The muses that we used to read about have disappeared before the emigrant's ax and the trapper's gun, and that man who is waiting for a life bewitched of wonders will never find it. There is, however, a field for endurance and great achievement, but it is in everyday life. There are Alps to scale, there are Hellesponts to swim, there are fires to brave; but they are all around us now. This is the hardest kind of martyrdom to bear.

It took grace to lead Latimer and Ridley through the fire triumphantly when their armed enemies and their friends were looking on; but it requires more grace now to bring men through persecution, when nobody is looking on. I could show you in this city a woman who has had rheumatism for twenty years, who has endured more suffering and exhausted more grace than would have made twenty martyrs pass triumphantly through the fire. If you are not faithful in an insignificant position in life you would not be faithful in a grand mission. If you cannot stand the bite of a midge, how could you endure the breath of a basilisk?

GOD IS GLORIFIED IN ALL GOOD WORK.

Do not think that any work God gives you to do in the world is on too small a scale for you to do. The whole universe is not ashamed to take care of one little flower. I say: "What are you doing down here in the grass, you poor little flower? Are you not afraid nights? You will be neglected, you will die of thirst, you will not be fed. Poor little flower!" "No," says a star, "I'll watch over it tonight." "No," says a cloud, "I'll give it drink." "No," says the sun, "I'll warm it in my bosom." Then I see the pulleys going and the clouds are drawing water, and I say, "What are you doing there, O clouds?" And they reply, "We are giving drink to that flower."

Then the wind rises, and comes bending down the wheat and sounding its psalm through the forest, and I cry, "Whither away on such swift wing, O wind?" And it replies, "We are going to cool the cheek of that flower." And then I bow down and say, "Will God take care of the grass of the field?" and a flower at my foot responds, "Yes; he clothes the lilies of the field, and never yet has forgotten me, a poor little flower." Oh, when I see the great heavens bending themselves to what seems insignificant ministration, when I find out that God does not forget any blossom of the spring or any snowflake of the winter, I come to the conclusion that we can afford to attend to the minute things in life, and that what we do we ought to do well, since there is as much perfection in the construction of a spider's eye as in the conformation of flaming galaxies.

Plato had a fable which I have now nearly forgotten, but it ran something like this: He said spirits of the other world came back to this world to find a body and find a sphere of work. One spirit came and took the body of a king, and did his work. Another spirit came and took the body of a poet, and did his work. After awhile Ulysses came, and he said, "Why, all the fine bodies are taken, and all the grand work is taken. There is nothing left for me." And some one replied, "Ah! the best one has been left for you." Ulysses said, "What's that?" And the reply was, "The body of a common man, doing a common work, and for a common reward." A good fable for the world, and just as good a fable for the church. Whether we eat or drink, or whatsoever we do, let us do it to the glory of God.

Again, we need to bring the religion of Christ into our commonest trials. For severe losses, for bereavement, for trouble that shocks like an earthquake and that blasts like a storm we prescribe religious consolation; but, business man, for the small annoyances of last week how much of the grace of God did you apply? "Oh," you say, "these trials are too small for such application." My brother, they are shaping your character, they are souring your temper, they are wearing out your patience and they are making you less and less of a man.

I go into a sculptor's studio and see him shaping a statue. He has a chisel in one hand and a mallet in the other, and he gives a very gentle stroke—click, click, click! I say, "Why don't you strike harder?" "Oh!" he replies, "that would shatter the statue. I can't do it that way. I must do it this way." So he works on, and after awhile the features come out and everybody that enters the studio is charmed and fascinated. Well, God has your soul under process of development, and it is the little annoyances and vexations of life that are chiseling out your immortal nature. It is click, click, click! I wonder why some great providence does not come and with one stroke prepare you for heaven. Ah, no. God says that is not the way.

And so he keeps on by strokes of little annoyances, little sorrows, little vexations, until at last you shall be a glad spectacle for angels and for men. You know that a large fortune may be spent in small change, and a vast amount of moral character may go away in small depletion. It is the little troubles of life that are having more effect upon you than great ones. A swarm of locusts will kill a grain field sooner than the incursion of three or four cattle. You say, "Since I lost my child, since I lost my property, I have been a different man."

But you do not recognize the architecture of little annoyances that are hewing, digging, cutting, shaping, splitting and interjoining your moral qualities. Rats may sink a ship. One lucifer match may send destruction through a block of storehouses. Catherine de Medicis got her death from smelling a poisonous rose. Columbus, by stopping and asking for a piece of bread and a drink of water at a Franciscan convent, was led to the discovery of the new world. And there is an intimate connection between trifles and immensities, between nothings and everythings.

NO SIN TOO SMALL TO BE AVOIDED.

Now, be careful to let none of those annoyances go through your soul unarraigned. Compel them to administer to your spiritual wealth. The scratch of a sixpenny nail sometimes produces lockjaw, and the clip of a most infinitesimal annoyance may damage you forever. Do not let any annoyance or perplexity come across your soul without its making you better.

Our national government does not think it belittling to put a tax on pins, and a tax on buckles, and a tax on shoes. The individual taxes do not amount to much, but in the aggregate to millions and millions of dollars. And I would have you, O Christian man, put a high tariff on every annoyance and vexation that comes through your soul. This might not amount to much in single cases, but in the aggregate it would be a great revenue of spiritual strength and satisfaction. A bee can suck honey even out of a nettle, and if you have the grace of God in your heart you can get sweetness out of that which would otherwise irritate and annoy.

A returned missionary told me that a company of adventurers rowing up the Ganges were stung to death by flies that infest that region at certain seasons. I have seen the earth strewed with the carcasses of men slain by insect annoyances. The only way to get prepared for the great troubles of life is to conquer these small troubles. What would you say of a soldier who refused to load his gun or to go into a conflict because it was only a skirmish, saying, "I am not going to expend my ammunition on a skirmish; wait until there comes a general engagement, and then you will see how courageous I am, and what battling I will do?" The general would say to such a man, "If you are not faithful in a skirmish, you would be nothing in a general engagement."

And I have to tell you, O Christian men, if you cannot apply the principles of Christ's religion on a small scale you will never be able to apply them on a large scale. If you cannot successfully contend against these small sorrows that come down single handed, what will you do when the greater disasters of life come down with thundering artillery rolling over your soul?

Again, we must bring the religion of Christ into our commonest blessings. When the autumn comes, and the harvests are in, and the governors make proclamation, we assemble in churches, and we are very thankful. But every day ought to be a thanksgiving day. We do not recognize the common mercies of life. We have to see a blind man led by his dog before we begin to think ourselves of what a grand thing it is to have eyesight. We have to see some one afflicted with St. Vitus' dance before we are ready to thank God for the control of our physical energies. We have to see some wounded man hobbling on his crutch, or with his empty coat sleeve pinned up, before we learn to think what a grand thing God did for us when he gave us healthy use of our limbs.

We are so stupid that nothing but the misfortunes of others can rouse us up to our blessings. As the ox grazes in the pasture up to its eyes in the clover, yet never thinking who makes the clover, and as the bird picks up the worm from the furrow, not knowing that it is God who makes everything, from the animalcula in the sod to the seraph on the throne, so we go on eating, drinking and enjoying, but never thanking or seldom thanking; or, if thanking at all, with only half a heart.

DO BRUTES AND PLANTS PRAISE GOD?

I compared our indifference to the brute; but perhaps I wronged the brute. I do not know but that, among its other instincts, it may have an instinct by which it recognizes the divine hand that feeds it. I do not know but that God is, through it, holding communication with what we call "irrational creation." The cow that stands under the willow by the water course chewing its cud looks very thankful; and who can tell how much a bird means by its song? The aroma of the flowers smells like incense, and the mist arising from the river looks like the smoke of a morning sacrifice. Oh, that we were as responsive!

Yet who thanks God for the water that gushes up in the well, and that foams in the cascades, and that laughs

WHY ARE THESE THINGS?

If You Can't Answer the Question, Why Not?

The person who can't think is an idiot.

The person who won't think is a fool.

The person who fears to think is a coward.

The person who dares to talk about evils and suggests remedies is a patriot.

ASTOUNDING FACT IN RELATION TO THE NATIONLAL DEBT.

The question has been asked us, "When were most of the interest bearing bonds issued, during the war or after the war?"

Nearly all the bonded debt of the United States was created after the war! At the close of the war the bonded debt was only adout 600 millions! Incredible as this may seem, it is true!

How came so many bonds (over four billions) to be issued after the war?

Why, in order that the greenbacks might be called in and burned. In order that the people's non-interest-bearing money might be replaced with great interest-bearing plutocratic greenbacks. In order that national banks might produce a currency which could only exist when borrowed from a bank, and the government currency—the greenback be retired and burned.

The way they did it was this: The government ordered fresh issues of "consols"—bonds—to be bought by bankers for greenbacks at from thirty-eight to sixty on the dollar. The bonds went out to draw interest in gold for the banker—the greenbacks came in, and were burned up—to the extent of about one and one-half times a thousand times, a thousand times, a thousand dollars! With these bonds, drawing six per cent in gold on a dollar worth 60c. in gold, the banker was given currency ready printed to loan back to the people from which the greenbacks had been taken for destruction!

That is honest, truthful history!

And thus we are brought face to face with the

the terrible fact—the most monumental fact raised upon the great checker-board of war—that the national debt made by the war was a mere bagatelle. Less than one billion of dollars of the three billion two hundred million of debt was made by the war. There were the 7-30 small denomination bonds, which floated as currency—middle classes using them in commerce. Then a billion and a half of bonded debt was created to take in the greenbacks and destroyed them!

like to complain—Tim has about all he can bear now—but they was days this week when I jest wanted to lay right down and die."

"Waal, now, I'll tell ye," said Council from his side of the stove, silencing everybody with his good natured roar, "I'd go down and see Butler, anyway, if I was you. I guess he'd let you have his purty cheap; the farm's all run down. He's ben anxious to let t' somebuddy next year. It 'ud be a good chance fer you. Anyhow, you go to bed, and sleep like a babe. I've got some ploughin' t' do anyhow, and we'll see if somethin' can't be done about your case. Ike, you go out an' see if the horses is all right, an' I'll show the folks t' bed."

When the tired husband and wife were lying under the generous quilts of the spare bed, Haskins listened a moment to the wind in the eaves, and then said, with a slow and solemn tone:

"There are people in this world who are good enough t' be angels, an' only haff t' die to be angels."

Jim Butler was one of those men called in the west "land poor." Early in the history of Rock River he had come into the town and started in the Grocery business in a small way, occupying a small building in a mean part of the town. At this period of his life he earned all he got, and was up early and late, sorting beans, working over butter, and carting his goods to and from the station. But a change came over him at the end of the second year, when he sold a lot of land for four times what he paid for it. From that time forward he believed in land speculation as the surest way of getting rich. Every cent he could save or spare from his trade he put into land at forced sale, or mortgages on land, which were "just as good as the wheat," he was accustomed to say.

Farm after farm fell into his hands, until he was recognized as one of the leading land-owners of the county. His mortgages were scattered all over Cedar County, and as they slowly but surely fell in he sought usually to retain the former owner as tenant.

He was not ready to foreclose; indeed, he had the name of being one of the "easiest" men in the town. He let the debtor off again and again, extending the time whenever possible.

"I don't want y'r land," he said. "All I'm after is the int'rest on my money—that's all. Now if y' want to stay on the farm, why, I'll give y' a good chance. I can't have the land layin' vacant." And in many cases the owner remained as tenant.

In the mean time he had sold his store; he couldn't spend time in it; he was mainly occupied now with sitting around town on rainy days, smoking and "gassin' with the boys," or in riding to and from his farms. In fishing time he fished a good deal. Doc Grimes, Ben Ashley and Cal Cheatham were his cronies on these fishing excursions or hunting trips in the time of chickens or partridges. In winter they went to northern Wisconsin to shoot deer.

In spite of all these signs of easy life; Butler persisted in saying he "hadn't money enough to pay taxes on his land," and was careful to convey the impression that he was poor in spite of his twenty farms. At one time he was said to be worth fifty thousand dollars, but land had been a little slow of sale of late, so that he was not worth so much. A fine farm, known as the Higley place, had fallen into his hands in the usual way the previous year, and he had not been able to find a tenant for it. Poor Higley after working himself nearly to death on it, in the attempt to lift the mostgage, had gone off to Dakota, leaving the farm and his curse to Butler.

This was the farm which Council advised Haskins to apply for; and the next day Council hitched up his team and drove down town to see Butler.

TARIFF SHOT.

From 1847 to 1861 the United States had a revenue tariff. This is the period to which high protectionists refer as our "free trade" period. It is their hobby to declare that those who favor a reduction of the tariff want to go back to a tariff such as we had then, and then they try to frighten the farmer by claiming that those were disastrous years. Let us see:

From 1847 to 1861 the average price of wheat in New York was $1.25 per bushel, or

After nearly twenty years of high and prohibitory duties the average price of wheat for the ten years ending with 1888 was only ninety-two cents per bushel, or

During the fourteen years under revenue tariffs, from 1847 to 1860, the average net wholsale of standard cotton sheeting was 7.8 cents per yard, or

For the ten years ending in 1888, under high duties the same sheeting averaged 7.7 cents per yard, or

During the revenue period a bushel of wheat would buy sixteen yards of standard sheeting, or

Under the high duties, however, a bushel of wheat would buy less than twelve yards of the same sheeting, or

And yet the high protectionists say that the tariff is a help to the farmer. When the farmer had no protective combines to support he got a fair price for his produces, but now what ought to be his profits are taken to swell the dividends of tariff protected combines and trusts.—Labor Wave.

A BLOW AT "FUTURES."

Washington, Jan. 15.—Representation Alexander, of North Carolina, to-day introduced in the House a bill relating to "gambling in agricultural products." This gambling, according to the bill, is defined to be a contract to sell for future dedivery, corn, wheat, oats, rice, barly, etc., the contractor or seller not being the owner or agent of the contract. The bill excludes from the males every letter, postal card or circular concerning gambling in agricultural products, and checks, drafts, bills, money, postal notes, or money orders for such purpose. It also excluds from the mails newspapers, circulars, pamplets or publications of any kind containing advertisements, telegraphic reports or other articles giving quotations of any market relating to gambling in agricultural products. A tax of $2 per word is levied on each Inter-State telegraph or telephone message used for or in aid of gambling referred to in the act.

TESTIMONIALS.

From Mr. J. S. Johnson, member Executive Committee N. C. State Alliance, and manager Alliance Warehouse at Danville, Va.

S. T. Morgan, Esq., Pres., Durham, N. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Yours of the 8th just to hand, am sorry I did not receive your circular letter, but am happy to say for your fertilizer that I do not know a single party among the numerous persons we delivered fertilizer to this season that is not perfectly satisfied with the results. Tobacco has fired some at the bottom, but they say that is entirely attributable to the wet season. I used eleven tons on my own farm, and have never used any fertilizer that has given such satisfactory results

Very truly and respectfully yours,

J. S. JOHNSTON

KINSTON, N. C., Oct. 2, 1891

W. H. Worth, S. B. A., Raleigh, N. C.

DEAR SIR AND BRO.: Replying to your enquiry as to the results of Farmers' Alliance Official Guano on my crop, will say it was entirely satisfactory and was as good as I ever used.

J. M. MEWBOURNE.

Mr. Mewbourne is a member of the State Alliance Executive Committee.

We are in receipt of the following relating to the same subject matter from W. H. Worth, State Business Agent, North Carolina Farmers' Alliance, to-wit:

[COPY.]

I, W. H. Worth, State Business Agent North Carolina Farmers' Alliance, certify that S. T. Morgan, President of the Durham Fertilizer Company, has shown me the original bills and analysis of the ingredients from which the Alliance Guano was made that was shipped to J. R. Smith at Mebane, N. C., and the books containing formula of the goods, and from the guaranteed analysis. I have examined the Superintendent of the Durham Fertilizer Factory under oath, and he has thoroughly satisfied me as to the materials used in this particular lot of goods. I have had every opportunity, and have thoroughly examined the whole matter, and feel satisfied that no wrong has been done us.

(Signed) W. H. WORTH, S. B. A.

We have over 400 reports and testimonials covering over eighty counties. These reports are almost every one from an Alliance, not from individuals. The original copies of these reports can be seen in our office at Durham, N. C. The following are a sample of the reports received from the following counties, which will be supplemented by other counties every two weeks in these columns:

SAMPSON COUNTY.

CLINTON, N. C., Aug. 25th, '91.

Have seen 90 per cent. of those who used it. The official is ahead, and if there is any one not pleased with it I have not been able to find him. Put us down for next season. G. A. CLUTZ, Manager Sampson County F. A. Store.

A. A. Page and S. P. Page, committee appointed by South River Lodge 831, to report on F. A. G.: After investigation, we find that no guano was used in this community gives more general satisfaction.

M. M. Killett, Secretary Laurel Hill Alliance, Clinton: Not one word of complaint of the seventeen tons used by this Alliance.

J. R. Cooper, B. A., Salem F. A., No. 600, Huntley, N. C.: Our Alliance intend buying from you another year, if the right arrangement can be made.

D. W. Tew, Secretary Byes' Bridge Alliance, Clinton, N. C., says: I think your fertilizer the best for cotton I have ever tried.

G. W. Highsmith, Secretary Keener's Alliance, No 578, Keener's, N. C., says: I am directed by our Alliance to inform you that your guano has proven to be much better than any other guano used in this section. Shall use it another year in preference to any other.

Our Alliance cheerfully recommend your guano as being everything the manufacturers claim for it.

ALFRED HALL, Way Cross, N. C.

DUPLIN COUNTY.

Rose Hill, Sept. 14th, 1891.

Durham Fertilizer Co.:—The Alliance Guano you furnished us this year will compare favorably with any guano on the market. It has done finely in the field. All of our alliance that I have seen, and that is nearly all, speaks in high terms of the superior qualities of your guano. J. C. WILLIAMS, B. A.

Rockfish Alliance, No. 846.

Magnolia, Aug. 13th, 1891.

Will say that I have heard no complaint from those who have used your guano, but at present all with whom I have talked on the subject say they are well satisfied. I think that as long as your guano is kept up to its present standard you may depend upon our custom. MORD TAYLOR, Prest.

Magnolia Alliance, No. 1119.

Teacheys, Aug. 17th, 1891.

In answer to your inquiry the fertilizer you furnished us has given entire satisfaction and compares faverably with any guano we have ever used. Some say it is the best they ever used.

C. HARRELL.

Wallace, Aug. 15th, 1891.

Your circular of inqury concerning the Alliance Guano was read in our alliance this day and all of the brethren that used this guano authorized me to say to you that it is giving satisfaction, and say the Alliance Guano is fully as good as any other kind they have used this season. D. E. BONEY, B. A.

Duplin Road Alliance, No. 1945.

Chinquepin, Sept. 14, 1891.

I will say in reply to your letter that your manure gave universal satisfaction to all parties who used it and every one of them say they will want more next year. It surpasses any fertilizer for the money that has been introduced in this market.

T. R. HATCHER, Pres.

Chinquepin Alliance, No. 1022.

BLADEN COUNTY.

A. M. Kelly, of Bladenboro, says: Our members say that they like your guano as well as any they ever used, and as a lodge are glad to endorse it.

From its inception THE ARENA has been the steadfost champion of people absolutely fearless in its denunciation of plutocracy, monopoly and all means and measures which wrong the multitude or infringe upon the liberty of the humblest citizen.

III. PSYCHICAL SCIENCE. During 1892 THE ARENA will have the ablest most authorative and brilliant series of papers ever published on psycnical science, by leading thinkers of the new world and the old.

IV. THE CONDITION OF WOMAN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. The opening paper appears in the January number, by Prof. A. N. Jannaris, P. D., of the National University of Greece. It is on "Woman in Mohommedan Lands."

V. SCIENTIFIC PAPERS. Popular papers on scientific subjects by the most profound thinkers of the age will also be a feature of THE ARENA for 1892. —Mr. W. N. Corbett, one of our best and most progressive farmers, brought us a curiosity in shape of a ear of corn raised by him. It has one large ear and seven smaller ones all on same stem. It seems that some of our farmers are not satisfied with making one ear to the stem, but have to make even eight. This is the second similar phenomena we have been shown.

The body will be brought home and buried to-day.

COL. BEAMAN DEAD.

The County Loses one of Its Oldest, Best and Most Prominent Citizens.

A LONG AND EVENTFUL LIFE.

A Strong, Unselfish and True Alliance Man.

Col. John R. Beaman is dead. The county mourns the loss of one of its best citizens, and the Alliance, one of the truest members of the great organization.

Six weeks ago Mr. Beaman was down street for his last time. He had contracted a deep-seated cold—complications of troubles followed that were too much for his strong though broken constitution. But his whole illness has been a heroic struggle against disease and death by the shattered remnant of a once powerful constitution, backed up by an indomitable will power that remained to the last. The end came Wednesday morning at 4 o'clock, while many of his large family and connections and friends gathered around his bedside.

During his illness he suffered great pain, though no complaint was ever heard. He bore his suffering with marked patience, bravery and fortitude.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral will take place to-day (Thursday) at one o'clock. The church service will be read at the Presbyterian church. The body will then be taken to Clinton Cemetery, where the burial service will be conducted by the ritual of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union.

AS A BUSINESS MAN

he was reliable, safe, prudent and prompt. He has probably settled more estates than an other man in the county and always with entire satisfaction to all. It seems to have been a great pleasure of his life to protect the weak and unprotected. Many orphan children remember with grateful hearts hundreds of kind favors he did for them.

AS A PUBLIC SERVANT

he was faithful in every trust, conscientious in discharge of every duty, true to every position. Since he was twenty years old he has continually held office in this county which alone sufficiently testifies to his estimate by the public.

AS A PUBLIC CITIZEN

he was one of those men, that do most in building up communities in which they live. Active, energetic and enterprising—he left nothing undone that would forward the interest of his county. He devoted much of his time and means to every cause in which he had faith would help his town and county.

AS A MAN

he was genial, cheerful, affectionate, manly, strong in his attachments, frank and unobtrusive in his manners, with no pretence about him. He enjoyed company, he loved children and was fond of young people's company, who always enjoyed being with him.

His house and home was ever open, not only to his friends, but noticably, that class who were not able to go to hotels. Frequently he had these with him, whom he did not know, but they were welcomed. In his family he was kind affectionate and generous. After his children married and left him, no pleasure was never more keenly anticipated than their regular visit, which they eagerly kept up to his death. He was ever the willing and strong friend of the poor boys of his county. It was his special pride and delight to help every worthy young man he could. He took them at his home with him and acted like a father to them all.

AS A REFORMER.

Though advance in age, beyond that period of life, when most men are capable of studying new conditions and throwing their energies and efforts for reform against deep rooted wrongs of gradual growth, yet when the Alliance was organized with its protest against present conditions and its demands for reform, he gave the situation a close study and decided that the organization was right, that the wrongs existed and that reform were a necessity. This was enough to decide his action. He threw his whole influence and energies into the movement. He said that he was too old to reap the benefits of or probably to see the reforms that the farmers were demanding and fighting for, but that he would give his last efforts to the movement, for in doing so he was fighting for his children, his fellow citizens and for the preservation of a Republican form of government.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

Mr. Beaman was born March 17, 1813 and therefore in his 79th year. For a half a century past his life has been so intimately connected that of the county, that a history of his life would in a great measure be a history of the county for that period. When a young man, we think in 1842, he was elected to the Legislature from this county. He declined a re-election. In 1846 he was elected clerk of Superior court, to which position he was successively re-elected till the opening of the war when he declined a re-election. After the war he was elected chairman of the Board of County Commissioners which place he held for a number of years. Upon the death of our esteemed countyman, Mr. A. B. Chesnutt in 1887 he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of county Treasurer. He has twice since been elected and held that office at the time of his death. He was also Treasurer of the county Alliance. He has been a remarkable success as a farmer and in everything else he has undertaken. He knew no such word as fail either in public or private affairs. We but half state it when we say that he will be greatly missed by our people in every station in life.

A BATCH OF NEWS,

From a Sampson Boy at Trinity.

[Special Correspondent.]

TRINITY COLLEGE, N. C.

Jan. 25th 1892.

Mr. Editor: Thinking of THE CAUCASIAN and home, I drop a few notes that will interest probably some of the readers of your valuable paper.

Trinity is still on the progress. Eight or ten new students have matriculated, since the opening of the spring term. Among the new ones is Mr. T. H. Sutton of Hobton, Sampson county.

A very serious accident happened to Mr. W. C. Merritt, soon after his return this term. While he was cutting wood the axe glanced and cut his left foot. The cut was about an inch deep. He He has been confined to his bed since he received the cut, but he is now rapidly improving, and will be up in a few days.

Mr. Sydney Johnson of Taylor's Bridge who is here in school, is very sick with bilious fever. His physician thinks he is improving, and we hope he will soon be ready to take up his studies again. He has shown himself to be a worthy and diligent student.

The prospects for the opening of the next session of this College at Durham, seem more probable now than heretofore. The main buildings are nearly completed, and donations are increasing for their completion. Mr. W. Duke, who, it is said, has already made the largest donation to an educational institution in the South, has now increased it from eighty five thousand dollars to one hundred and twenty thousand, including twenty thousand dollars worth of property.

University extension, which is very prominent among our northern Colleges, is being adopted by this institution. One of the first exponents of the idea in this country was Prof. Benjamin Silliman of Yale. Its plan is to organize throughout the country classes, who can take College studies by weekly or monthly lectures. A syllabus of each study is put in pamphlet form to be distributed among the members of the classes. Its plan is very plausible, and also feasible, if it is not considered, as a theory, too "Utopian" in the North, among a practical people. But there are many who could take such a course and not neglect their occupations. At any rate it has worked well in the South, and it is reasonable enough to suppose that it will do the same here.

An outcome of such work has been the establishment of several institutions of learning. Prominent among such institutions is the mechanics Instituti in New Haven. Much success to THE CAUCASIAN. T. T. JAMES.

DUPLIN COUNTY.

WARSAW NOTES.

Mr. Meeks sermons were quite a treat Sunday morning and night.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. L R Carroll is improving, after having had a severe attack of LaGrippe. Miss Mamie Fryar who has been with her during her sickness, will return to her home at Magnolia in a few days.

Miss Maggie Bass will not return to Oxford.

The bird hunters, who have been in town for several days, have returned to their homes in New York. We are afraid there will not be many birds to sing for us next spring.

Miss Ella Chatman, of Corington, Va. is music teacher of Warsaw High School. Warsaw is lucky in getting such an excellent young lady.

Miss Margaret Kennedy is destined to to be the "Belle" of our city. We hope to see her, ere long in her carriage, making her way to the "Drug Store."

Miss Lilian Kirby, late of Savannah, Ga., spent Monday night with friends in Warsaw. A SUBSCRIBER

Gratifying to All.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly gratifying to the California Fig Syrup Company.

Miss Annie L. Clifton returned home on the 18th inst., from Murfressboro, N. C., where she has been attending the O. B. F. Institute. Her many friends were glad to welcome her home again. She is an accomplished lady and wins the love of all who meet her.

Miss Hattie King of Clinton, who has been teaching at Poplar Grove for some time, has a full school. The school numbers about 40. Miss Hattie is an excellent teacher and is much thought of by all the patrons of the school.

Married, on the 20th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Dr. J. H. Darden, Miss Emma G. Darden to Mr. Hedric Wells of Pender county, N. C. Rev. J. O. Tew, officiating. The attendance were: Mr. J. C. Miller with Miss Mary Darden, Mr. M. M. Bell with Miss Bettie McPhail, Mr. D. A. King with Miss Lutie A. Bell, Mr. Haywood Wells with Miss Lillie Boll, Mr. H. J. COLD AIR ON DRAFT.

How Buildings in Kansas City Are to Be Cooled and Ice to Be Made.

Kansas City will be the first city in the world to experiment with a system which promises to introduce cool air into any business house or residence in the city. More than that, it is proposed by this system to make ice in refrigerators at one-third the present cost of that rather expensive summer luxury. The men at the head of the scheme are Daniel O'Keefe, T. R. Bullene, E. H. Phelps and H. R. Clauss.

Daniel O'Keefe, of Kansas City, is the inventor of the system, and says that he has been at work on it since 1869. He argues that if the scheme of heating buildings by hot air is successful, why cannot the cooling of them by cold air be equally as successful? At the central station will be ammonia and air compressors, brine and vacuum pumps, brine and air cooling tanks and receiving and discharging connections.

The conduits first laid will be 22 inches in diameter, with four separate chambers. The upper and largest one will contain cold air. The two lower ones will be used for discharging and returning the anhydrous ammonia brine. In the center of the conduit will be a vacuum chamber. The air can be introduced into any house at a reasonable cost, and the temperature can be regulated easily from 70 degs. to zero. The liquid can be used for freezing purposes and Mr. O'Keefe claims that ice can be made for one-third the present cost. Mr. O'Keefe expects that one of the greatest features of his scheme will be the use of the air as a disinfectant in the sick room.

It is claimed that the plant and conduits can be placed in operation for about $250,000. The ordinance provides that 2,000 feet of conduits shall be in use within two years, and that work shall be begun under the provisions of the franchise within six months after the passage of the measure. O'Keefe declares that all the pipe will be laid before Oct. 1. The work is to be done under the direction of the city engineer and the board of public works, and a $10,000 bond is to be given to insure the city. When the company desires hereafter to make extensions the board of public works is to be authorized to grant permits under proper instructions, with the provision that no excavations shall interfere with any pipes, sewers or other underground mains.

Mr. O'Keefe says that the system will be perfectly safe, low pressure alone being used in the conduits. The process is entirely different from the brine cooling system now in use at the packing houses and breweries.—Kansas City Times.

Remembrances for a Sea Voyage.

If you have a friend crossing the water this summer, and want to give her some little token of remembrance, some little gift that will show your good will and good feeling toward her, here is an idea for you. Your friend will probably be out six or seven days. Sit down and write seven letters. Make them as bright, interesting and amusing as your intelligence and intellect permit. If you feel that your heart is larger than your brain get a kind friend to assist you. Put each letter in a separate envelope and address it. On the day the ship sails make it your business to find the head table steward, give the packet into his keeping, and enjoin him strictly to give your friend each morning with her coffee one of the letters.

A small fee accompanying the epistle would be a good idea. It is a most wonderful assistance to the memory. If you wish you can also intrust to the steward's care some fruit and a little wine. And if your friend is so unfortunate as to be troubled with mal de mer she will be your debtor for life if on the third or fourth morning out a bottle of sparkling champagne, accompanied by a bright, spicy letter, is presented to her with your compliments. —New York Advertiser.

General Tuttle's Historic Sword.

The sword that flashed over the ramparts at Fort Donelson in the hands of Colonel J. M. Tuttle, of the Second Iowa regiment of volunteers, when that "forlorn hope" assaulted the works Feb. 15, 1862, has just been given to the state library of Iowa by General Tuttle, who is about to remove from Des Moines to Arizona. According to the story that is told, General Smith, who commanded the division before Donelson, had asked in vain a number of regiments to make the dash upon the enemy's intrenchments, when Colonel Tuttle said, "Support me promptly, and in twenty minutes we will take the works."

The colonel went ahead with 300 men, of whom about one-half were quickly killed or wounded as soon as the Confederates concentrated upon them their fire. The great achievement of the Second Iowa was that, instead of breaking in disorder, they girded themselves for another rush, which carried them into the enemy's trenches.—Springfield Republican.

A Seven-by-Thirteen Coincidence.

Nathaniel Witherell, who died at Glen's Falls, N. Y., always regarded himself a living oddity. He was the thirteenth child and the seventh son of his parents, and the youngest child in the family. Mrs. Witherell, who still survives her husband, occupies the same relative position in her father's family, being the thirteenth and youngest child and the seventh daughter of her parents. When Mr. Witherell died they had been married sixty-five years, five times thirteen.—St. Louis Republic.

A Raspberry Without Thorns.

A thornless raspberry has been examined by Professor Britton, of New York city. It was sent to him by Professor Millspaugh, of the West Virginia Agricultural experiment station. It grows luxuriantly in Randolph county, W. Va., and bears fruit, but no briers. Professor Britton pronounced the berry new to horticulture, and named it Rubus Millspaugh, after its discoverer.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WESTBROOKS.

Mr. Editor—As we have not heard from Westbrook's in some time through your paper we have decided to drop you a few dots for publication.

Mr. Noel West killed a hog last week that weighed 390 pounds net.

La Grippe is raging quite extensively in this section.

Leap year parties have blossomed, and more are in bloom.

Mr. Pennington West is speaking of going to Wilmington. Mr. West is is a model gentleman, and we regret to lose him.

Miss Ida Hudson, one of Wayne's fairest sex has just returned home from a visit to her friends and relatives in this community.

Mr. James Williams and Miss Carrie Daughtry were united into the holy bonds of matrimony on the 30th ultimo.

One of our non-protestant brethren in this section sometime ago, while his wife was from home, baptized the baby. When his wife returned, and learning what had took place, immediately obtained some water and washed it off.

One of the funniest things that have occurred for sometime in this section was Sam and Joe's "ghost." Sam was going with Joe to see his best girl. On the way Joe mentioned to Sam about "ghost spectres" and other fictitious beings which tickled Sam very much, for Sam had been informed that there would be one of these beings on the way that night to scare Joe. On they walked talking about these things, and all at once Joe stopped and says to Sam, "Sam, what is that yonder?" "I don't know," says Sam. It looks like somebody."

Sam commenced gazing around at it like he was scared powerful bad. By this time Joe commenced to give back and said to Sam "Let us go back and get the gun." Sam says, "I will stay if you will go and get it." But Joe would not go. By this time Sam was getting scared sure enough, and week in the knees, and this scared Joe more. Sam says "Its got no head!" "Yes, it has," says Joe, "I see it!"

Then Joe screamed out in a loud voice, "If its any of God's work, we had just as well give up; and if its any body, we are not afraid of it." By this time they agreed to give it the road and go by it, and they broke to running, and Sam was gaining on Joe. Joe hallowed out "wait!" After they passed by they decided if it would let them alone they would it. So they went on together to see Joe's best girl. But Joe did not enjoy himself at all for all he could talk about was the ghost. And behold! when they found out what it was, it wss a piece of scantling with a piece of wood nailed across for its arms, with a lady's dress on it, stuffed with pine boughs. O & J.

MCDANIEL'S.

The Demorest contest No. 1, of McDaniel's, managed by Judson Hobbs, held a contest at Andrews' Chapel on January 17th, 1892. The medal was awarded to Miss Julia Owen, presented by Rev. A. J. Parker. Subject: "Nationalism against sectionalism." May God bless the girls and help them.

Married, at the residence of Mr. Reeves Faircloth, Mr. John Faircloth to Miss Julia Rich. The attendants were Mr. Burrell Faircloth with Miss Emma Rich; Mr. Jimmie Faircloth with Miss Anna Rich; Mr. Buck Rich with Miss Minnie Faircloth; Mr. June Rich with Miss Lula Peterson, Mr. R. L. Lewis, J. P., officiating. We wish them a long and happy life.

Mr. J. O. Culbreth is repairing his dwelling at Boykin's Bridge, which adds much to its appearance.

The continuous rains are putting the farmers behind with their farm work. Sub.

LISBON.

Mr. Dallas Herring killed his big hog a short time ago. He weighed 468 pounds. If all our farmers would do like Mr. Herring in this respect but little meat would be bought.

LITTLE COHARIE.

Our farmers are progressing with their work, although La Grippe and bad weather have been a great hindrance. There are a good many cases of La Grippe yet, but most of its victims are convalescent.

This writer had the pleasure of hearing a very impressive and interesting sermon at Concord last Sunday evening from Rev. A. J. Parker. Mr. Parker is a young man and has a good appearance.

We anticipate a pleasant time the last of the week. The M. E. Conference meets at Concord and the South River Union at White Oak. We expect nourishments, both physically and spiritually. C.

DISMAL.

Demorest class No. 1 of Halls Chapel, held a contest at that place on the night of Jan. 16th. The speeches were all good, and the whole was intersperced with beautiful songs charmingly rendered by the entire lodge of I. O. G. T. The medal was awarded to a bright sparkling eyed Sampson belle, Miss Raney G. Sessoms. The Judges were Messrs R. O. Autry, L. A. Spell, and Thos. Williams. Demorest class No. 2 will hold a contest at Halls Chapel, on the night of Feb. 6th, everybody invited to attend.

LaGrippe, la-catarrh, la-ezizoot, la-influenza, la-ten handkerchiefs a day and one under your pillow at night, is bad in this vicinity. Dr. T. C. Bullock and several others are very sick with it.

Mr. F. I. McKinzie of Autryville has gone on a flying trip to Ga.

Mr. Evander Williams and Miss Rosa Lane were solemely united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the residence of Mr. Wm. Sessoms, J. D. O. Culbreth, Esq., officiating. We wish the happy couple a long and successful life.

We have heard of some leap year parties, but have not had the pleasure of any visiting us yet.

Messrs. Bascom and Dallie Spell, and two children of the former, have been visiting relatives at Red Springs.

The recent rains have caused a rise in the navigable streams of this vicinity. consequently several of our citizens have gone to Wilmington. "Gil."

The youngest son of Mr. B.H. Melvin, aged 13 years, accidently shot himself a short time ago. He had a pistol in his pocket, though his parents knew nothing about it, and while trying to unload it, it went off, the ball taking effect in his stomach, Dr. Anders who was immediately called in pronounced it dangerous, though not a fatal wound. Mr. E. R. Wilson left on the 10th inst. for Dobbersville, where he will take charge of his school in Eastern Sampson. We hope him much success.

ALLIANCE NOTES, DISCUSSIONS AND THE DOINGS OF THE VARIOUS LODGES.

[The Caucasian was adopted as the Official Organ of the Sampson County Alliance at the meeting in January 19th, 1889.]

DUPLIN COUNTY.

The Caucasian was adopted as the official Organ of the Duplin County Alliance at the January meeting of 1891.

WARSAW, Jan. 14th, '92.

Mr. Editor—A very interesting meeting of Duplin County Farmers' Alliance was held today at La Place. Business of importance to the Alliance was transacted. The subjects before the meeting were discussed with a zest and earnestness that indicated thought on the great problems of the day, that are to be solved by the wealth-producers of this Republic. While the Alliance of Duplin county are conservative they stand almost to a man upon the St. Louis, Ocala and Indianapolis demands. They believe that the demands of the Alliance if enacted into laws, will bring relief, and insure justice to the people. They feel that liberty and justice are paramount to partisanism. While they as fellow-citizens, having been educated in the doctrines of reform, will support that party for the time, whose platform approaches the nearest their ideas of reform, yet they repel all attempts to make their noble Order a political machine.

Fifteen dollars were donated to a distressed brother of Washington Alliance. Five dollars were appropriated to the Educational Propiganda Fund. One of the most elegant dinners that it has been my privilege to partake of since the one given at the same place in August, was spread out on an ample table, of which everybody present were invited to partake, whether members of the Alliance or not.

The Alliance demands were discussed in the evening by brothers Keathly and others, in an instructive and interesting manner, and we have no doubt the Alliance cause has been strengthened in Duplin.

Our April meeting will be held in Kenansville.

Fraternally,

S. J. Veach,
Cor. Sec'y D. F. A.

GUARD YOUR CREDIT.

The Alliance as an organization teaches and practices good business methods. Let every brother see that the credit of his Alliance does not suffer on account of his failure to be prompt. The use of Alliance credit has saved big sums to the members, and they should protect that credit at all hazards.—The Business Agent.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.

The experience of the co-operative store system, both in the Grange and Alliance, constrain us to say to those contemplating going into the store business, Don't. Such goods as farming implements, groceries and general farm supplies can be handled much more cheaply through our agency system than any other, and, besides, merchandising is not always attended with success, as ninety per cent. of all those who start fail. Bond your agent and let him buy necessaries and keep on hand for the members, and save expenses incident to merchandising—The Business Agent.

THEY DANCE ON THE OCALA PLATFORM

We always did think that girls could do a great deal for reform. At Sartoria, Nebraska, the girls won't dance with a young man unless he is a member of the Alliance, and the dancing has to be done on the Ocala platform.—Ex.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

The great and absorbing question with the masses is, what must be done in order to secure justice, preserve their liberties, and send a thrill of prosperity throughout the country? There are some who claim that the country is in the most prosperous condition that is has ever known, and when the masses assert that something is wrong—that there is not such general prosperity—they are denominated "calamity howlers," croakers and malcontents. The farming element is the most conservative of all, and when you hear the farmers universally complaining of their condition, you may be assured that something is radically wrong.—Farmers' Advocate.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Price 50 cents, and $1.00 per bottle Dr. R. H. Holliday's Drugstore, Clinton, N. C.; J. R. Smith, Druggist, Mt. Olive, N. C.

Our Farmers' Column.

SOMETHING INTERESTING TO THOSE WHO TILL THE SOIL.

"There is no material progress that is well based and permanent without agricultural progress."

Official notice is given by the Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture of the adoption by that Board of a resolution introduced by W. R. Williams, calling on the farmers of North Carolina to reduce the cotton acreage 20 per cent. and to plant food crops and to pay special attention to diversification of crops.

Dead or decaying wood is always a prolific breeding place for injurious insects. Those dead limbs in your apple trees may have been a harbor for borers all summer, It is by carelessness and neglect of this sort that we make trouble for ourselves in fruit growing.

The best results with manure are obtained when the manure is fine and evenly spread. The cost of all manures depends on the labor bestowed upon it, and the finer the manure the less labor will be necessary to haul and spread it.

CLEAN HARNESS AND SOFT.

John Flin, Kansas, desires to know how to keep harness clean and soft. Clean your harness thoroughly with a large piece of woolen cloth moistened with kerosene as often as it becomes dirty. After being out in the rain and mud clean it, and wipe it with a piece of old flannel shirt quilted double. If desired a little good blacking may be smeared over the wiping flannel. Oil and varnish make the harness dirty and rotten. When you bring in your horses soiled and sweaty, treat them the same way you do the harness and they will last like the harness, a good deal longer. Both treated as advised will keep supple and look well.—American Agriculturist.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTULE VS. FARMERS' ALLIANCE OFFICIAL GUANO.

(The Business Agent.)

The case against the Durham Fertilizer Company at Oxford, came up for trial on December 5th, '91. The complaint was for failure to give full value to the farmers in the Farmers' Alliance Official Guano. Twenty or more brands on sale in the State last year were in the same box, but were not seized. The peculiar part of the proceeding was in selecting the jury.

It was claimed that fraud had been perpetrated on the farmers (Alliancemen) of Grauville county by Durham Fertilizer Company, and when the attorneys for the Department of Agriculture came to challenge jurors, they exhausted their challenge by setting aside the self same defrauded farmers! Phew! great Cæsar! Why? When the lawyers of Durham Fertilizer Company came to challenge jurors, they tried to get on the jury as many of these defrauded farmers (Alliancemen) as possible. All this was strange to those who did not know the true inwardness of the matter, and we venture to say it is without a parallel in North Carolina courts. After amendments of the complaint had been allowed, the examination of two witnesses for the plaintiffs, they asked for a nonsuit.

This case finds no parallel except in point of spirit, and that case was the malicious persecution, villification and abuse of every Allianceman by the powers that be, from President Polk down, who dared to fulfill his mission and do his duty to the Alliance Order.
